Mr. Vancleve, from the committee appointed to enquire into the necessity of continuing the auditor's office, reported,

THAT they have examined into the business to them submitted, and find—1st, That there are a few accounts of agents of forfeited estates unsettled.
2d, That by a law, passed December 20, 1781, the clerks of the several counties are directed to transmit to the auditor abstracts of the fines and amercements, &c. of the courts of their respective counties. 3d, And by the same law the receipts of monies paid into the treasury should be registered in that office; and 4th, by a law passed the 15th February, 1798, the auditor is directed to countersign the orders drawn on the treasurer for the payment of money to the inspectors of the state prison. As to the first particular, those few accounts that remain unsettled, the delay seems to have been occasioned by the difficulty of collecting the monies arising from sales by the agents, and those accounts are of long standing, as appears by the auditor not having reported any settlement for a number of years past—As to the second particular, your committee are of opinion, that those abstracts ought to be made to the treasurer instead of the auditor—As to the third, the committee thinks receipts may be as properly registered by the secretary in his office—As to the 4th particular, your committee are of opinion that the clause of the law directing the auditor to countersign those orders ought to be repealed. On the whole, it is the opinion of your committee, that it is not necessary, at present, to continue the auditor's office in the manner it is now kept, but that a law ought to be passed to alter those laws above referred to, and to direct the books and papers now in that office, belonging to the state, to be deposited in the secretary's office for the more safe-keeping the same, and authorizing the secretary to do those duties of the auditor's office that will then remain necessary to be done.

A message from the Council, by Mr. Beatty, their secretary.

Mr. Speaker,

The Council have rejected the bill, intituled, "An act for the relief of Benjamin Stevenson, executor and legatee of James Stevenson, deceased."

Mr. Condict, from the committee appointed to enquire into the state of the penitentiaries, and to settle the accounts of Jonathan Doan, reported,

THAT they have examined the said building, the keeper's house, consisting of four rooms on a floor, besides the hall, cellar and piazza; the rooms on the first floor are finished and convenient for the purposes intended, two of which are designed for the keeper, the other two for the inspectors and clerks ; the upper rooms are not finished. The cellar, or ground story, is divided into a kitchen or cooking-room, a baking-room, a dining-room that will admit of about sixty persons dining at once, and two store-rooms, all very convenient.

The left wing of the said building, intended for the confinement and employment of male prisoners, is completed, or nearly so ; the ground story of which is divided into a long hall, a washing-room and a work-shop and pump-room, containing the well of water. The second, or middle story, is divided into two work-shops or rooms, an infirmary, a long hall and a temporary cell, all secured with iron grated doors with bars and locks, and arched over head. The third, or upper story, is divided into two lodging-rooms of confinement, which will contain about fifteen persons each, a lodging-room for the under-keepers, two halls and a temporary cell, all secured with iron grated doors, bars and locks, also arched over head.

The right wing, designed for the confining and employment of females, is not yet finished, the walls of which are nearly up ; the cellar, or ground story, of which is divided into a cellar, a washing-room and one other working-room, a hall and stair-case. The second, or middle story, is divided into two working-rooms, a hall and stair-case. The third, or upper story, is divided into two lodging-rooms of confinement, a hall and stair-case.

The yard is inclosed with a stone wall agreeably to the directions of the law, with a partition wall of the same height, dividing the apartment designed for the males from that of the females ; there is, besides the well above-mentioned, two other wells of water—one for the use of the female prisoners, the other near the place where permanent cells are to be built.

The whole of the work, as far as your committee could judge, appears to be well done, and the regulations established by the board of directors appear to be judicious and well calculated to promote the intentions of the institution, and the methods made use of by the keeper of the house as to the treatment of the prisoners, keeping their accounts, diet, &c. meets the approbation of your committee ; but the said prisoners are not yet employed at any manufacturing business, owing, as it is said, to the prevalence of the sickness in Philadelphia, which has prevented procuring proper materials.

And your committee further report, That we have examined the accounts of Jonathan Doan, and find the said Jonathan Doan has drawn from the treasury the sum of £4852 0 3, and received for sundry refuse materials sold £5 10 8½, making £4857 10 11½, and that he has expended the sum of £5244 5 8, including the sum of £494 4 2, reported to be due him on the 4th day of November last, and that a balance is now due to him of £386 14 8½, and a further sum of £195 13 1 for 250 days attendance, superintending the work and expenses.

And your committee further report, That the said Jonathan Doan has made several contracts for materials not yet paid for, which with his estimate for finishing the said building, will amount to about £1400 more, which is stated as follows, viz.

Resolved, That the senators and representatives of this state, in the Congress of the United States, be and they are hereby requested to use their best endeavours that Congress propose to the Legislatures of the several states the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to wit:

That, in addition to the other qualifications prescribed by the said constitution, no person shall be eligible as president or vice-president of the United States, nor shall any person be a senator or representative in the Congress of the United States, except a natural born citizen, or unless he shall have been a resident in the United States at the time of the declaration of independence, and shall have continued to reside within the same, or to be employed in its service from that period to the time of his election; and in case the senators and representatives of this state in Congress shall find that the aforesaid amendment is not conformable to the sentiments of a constitutional majority of the national Legislature, they are hereby requested so to modify the same as to meet the sentiments of such majority: Provided, however, That any amendment which may be agreed upon shall exclude from a seat in either branch of Congress, any person who shall not have been naturalized at the time of making this amendment, and have been a citizen of the United States fourteen years at least, at the time of such election.

Resolved, That the Legislature of the state of New-Jersey have taken into serious consideration the communications from the Legislature of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, dated the twenty-eighth day of June, in the year of our Lord seventeen hundred and ninety-eight, and on mature deliberation are of opinion that the alteration proposed to be made in the constitution of the United States of America, by the Legislature of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, ought not to be agreed to—

1st, Because it is the opinion of this Legislature, that the constitution of the United States, and the laws made in conformity thereto, are sufficiently guarded on the subject matter of the said resolutions.

2d, That even if the Legislature of New-Jersey should be mistaken in the first point, yet that no circumstances, that can at present be supposed to exist, are so imperious as to justify the people of America in depriving the class of citizens which are the object of the said communications from the rights they have already fairly acquired of being eligible to a seat in our national councils.

Resolved, That the president of the Council and speaker of the House of Assembly be requested jointly to transmit the foregoing resolution to the Legislature of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, and at the same time to inform the said Legislature, that the Legislature of the state of New-Jersey entertain a high sense of the patriotism and virtue of the Legislature of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, and particularly its attachment to the constitution of the United States, and that it is after the most mature deliberation and unbiaſſed reflection, that it hath found itself under the necessity of a departure in opinion from the Legislature of the said commonwealth.

On the question, Whether the said address, which is agreed to by the house in the following words, be engrossed?

JOHN ADAMS, PRESIDENT of the UNITED STATES of AMERICA.

SIR,

AT a time like this, when our rights are invaded by a foreign nation, and our property unjustly taken away; when our ministers of reconciliation are treated with contumely and rejected with disdain; when the fate of conquered republics is presented to our view to terrify us into submission, and that too through the instrumentality of our own citizens; at a time like this, sir, when weak men despond and wicked men forsake their country, the Legislative-Council and General Assembly of New-Jersey think it their duty to express to you their entire confidence in the administration of the general government, and their fullest determination to maintain and support it.

While we have strictly pursued the duties of neutrality, they have plundered our citizens on the high seas, they have seized and condemned our defenceless trading vessels, they have interdicted our commerce on pains of forfeiture. Under these injuries we have remonstrated and reclaimed our right, but we have remonstrated and reclaimed in vain.

When we sent an ambassador with full powers to negotiate, and, if we had offended, to make satisfaction, they refused to hear him; when we bore with patience this wanton insult and again sent three of our most distinguished citizens as envoys extraordinary, with still more explicit, and, if possible, more ample powers, they did worse, they not only refused to hear them, but actually claimed the right of selecting for themselves the man with whom they would negotiate. When we refused tamely to submit to such treatment, and continued to assert our rights, they pointed to their conquered provinces, groaning under the weight of their exactions, and told us our fate; nay, they even presumed to found their hopes of conquest here, on claims of interest in the American mind, superior to that which its own government had attained.

In a situation like this, what more could be done, than to declare that treaty no longer obligatory on our part, which they, on theirs, had openly violated and professedly set at nought? than to abandon all further attempts at negotiation, and prohibit a friendly intercourse with those who had abused our friendship; than to draw forth the resources of the republic in making preparations for defensive war.

Sensible of the blessings of liberty, we rejoice that we have, in our chief magistrate, a man, who, in times like these, dares to speak the sentiments of every true American, and at least claim to be free. The first to propose the independence of our country, always engaged in directing her Councils, and making her interest the business of your life, we repose with confidence, sir, on your wisdom and integrity, aided and supported by the energy of the American people, to conduct her in this alarming crisis of her affairs, and to lead her to prosperity and peace.

That the fine spun philosophy of some visionary men, and the overweening ambition of others, disappointed in the pursuit of honors and offices for which they were never fit, should array them against the government; that this band should aggregate to themselves many discontented foreigners who can be happy under no laws, and even many honest emigrants, who being strangers in our land, are also strangers to that amor patriæ which warms every American bosom, and that these, in a day of difficulty, should oppose themselves to our public measures, is neither a subject of wonder, nor a cause of dismay.

Misrepresentation and falsehood may, for a time, lead even honest men astray. In these, as if they were the peculiar weapons of their warfare, the enemies of our country cannot bear restraint; but however restless they may feel, and however hard they may struggle, we rest assured that the force of truth is great, and must at length prevail.

Representatives of a people warmly attached to the constitution and the laws of their country, we may venture to say, that the sentiments which we express are the sentiments of our constituents; accustomed to order and duly appreciating the blessings of good government, they will be the last to oppose, but we humbly presume, not the last to protect and defend them.

Accept, sir, our sincerest wishes for your health and happiness, and be assured, when we thus present them, we are actuated not solely by the respect and esteem which we have for your person and character, but also by the love which we have for our country, and for the whole human race.
